Google and Your Patrons

Questions

How should we address Google on our library web site? Should we provide a link to Google Scholar or Google Print?

It looks like more and more traditional library content, such as databases like Ebsco and Proquest, will be integrated into Google in the future. What do you think that means for our libraries?

As a librarian I think Google is the greatest resource, and I'd be only too happy if all library resources were just like it. Why are the panelists so worried about Google?

I really was amazed by those tools that show what Google is missing – but how can I get my library patrons to pay attention to them?

I don't have a lot of time to keep up with Google. If I can only do one thing, what should that be?
