

For Immediate Release
February 1, 2011

Contact: John Bond
856-848-1000 ext. 294
jbond@slackinc.com

Journal of Nursing Education* announces winner of the annual Top Teaching Tools Awards

Thorofare, NJ – SLACK Incorporated’s Journal of Nursing Education is pleased to announce two winners of this year’s annual Top Teaching Tools Awards. —one in print media and one as a Web-based tool. The 2011 winners are Linda Caputi, MSN, EdD, RN, CNE, in the print category, with Teaching Nursing: The Art and Science, 3 Volume Set, Second Edition (book includes supplemental CD), and Danita Alfred, PhD, RN, in the Web category, with Medical Special Needs Shelter Orientation: Just –in-Time Online Training Website.

The Top Teaching Tools Awards, from the Journal of Nursing Education, are given to the best educational resources of the previous year that can be adopted by nurse educators in support of the teaching-learning process, curriculum, and/or faculty development in undergraduate and graduate nursing programs. Eligible “tools” may include books, software, media, interactive Web sites, open source Web-based resources, simulation technology, or other educational resources. Experts in the field, appointed by Christine Tanner, PhD, RN, FAAN, editor of the Journal, have been invited to serve as referees on the Award Selection Committee.

2011 marks the 50th anniversary for the Journal of Nursing Education. The Journal publishes major articles, research briefs, educational innovations, and syllabus selections. Exclusive content: articles are posted a few weeks after acceptance and prior to print, exclusively for subscribers, on the journal’s Web site, www.JournalofNursingEducation.com.

Visit <http://www.journalofnursingeducation.com/pdfs/JNEawardSubmission.pdf> for more information about submitting a resource for the 2012 awards. Winners receive recognition in print and on the Web site.

#####

About SLACK Incorporated

SLACK Incorporated is a leading provider of information to targeted health care specialties. SLACK Incorporated produces 42 publications in print and online; publishes more than 250 medical and allied health books; creates and operates more than 50 Web site and Internet-related projects; directs meetings and exhibits around the world; and produces custom newspapers and meeting supplements for a growing number of health care conventions and meetings. For more information, visit SLACK at slackinc.com.